Exhibit A

Trakloc "New End"

The above drawing represents an improvement to the Trakloc system. This drawing represents a new Trakloc extension end, referred to as a "TSE", that will allow for vertical deflection. This new improved profile will allow for drywall to be attached to the primary Trakloc stud, referred to as a "TSO", without pinning the TSE to the TSO and therefore preventing deflection. This "New End" is an improvement over the currently tested and approved system that incorporates a slotted TSE in order to achieve deflection. With this "New End", installers in the field will no longer be required to worry about hitting the slotted area of the TSE as precisely with the top drywall attachment fastener. They can put the top drywall attachment fastener anywhere without having to worry about inadvertently pinning the TSO to the TSE and thus preventing deflection.
