Title of invention: Improved EM immune Coil Sensor

Your invention dated January 19, 2017 received on January 19, 2017

Dear Mr. Fechting:

We hereby confirm receipt of your above-identified invention disclosure. We assume that, on the basis of the relevant legal provisions, your invention is an employee service invention which you made or which you assisted to make in the course of or in connection with performing your duties and fulfilling your contractual obligations towards your employer and that, for this reason, all rights to the invention originally belong to your employer. The invention is to be kept secret by you.

EPCOS has entrusted our law firm with representing them in all intellectual property (IP) matters. For this reason, most of the further correspondence with you will be handled by us. We kindly ask you to keep us informed about any changes in your address as long as IP matters are pending or IP rights for which you are designated as an inventor are in force. We further ask you to inform us prior to passing on products or information to external parties.

Should you require any further information regarding the handling of your invention, please feel free to contact us via the indicated telephone number.

Art. 332

E. Rights to inventions and designs

¹ Inventions and designs which the employee makes or helps to make in the course of his or her official duties and in fulfillment of his or her contractual obligations belong to the employer, irrespective of their protectability.

² By written agreement, the employer may reserve the right to acquire inventions and designs made by the employee in the course of his or her official duties but not in fulfillment of his or her contractual obligations.

³ The employee who makes an invention or a design pursuant to paragraph 2 shall notify the employer thereof in writing; the employer shall notify the employee in writing within six months whether it intends to acquire the invention or the design or release it to the employee.

⁴ If the invention or the design is not released to the employee, the employer shall pay him or her a special appropriate remuneration; in determining this remuneration, all circumstances shall be taken into account, such as, in particular, the economic value of the invention or the design, the cooperation of the employer, the use of its auxiliary persons and operating facilities, as well as the expenses of the employee and his or her position in the company.
